Part 2 - Purpose

2. Our purpose

- (1) The Cad Factory is established as a charity to nurture and develop arts capacity in regional communities; to advance arts and culture locally, nationally and internationally; and, to build meaningful partnerships in order to create a program of new, immersive and experimental work guided by authentic exchange and ethical principles.

The Cad Factory embraces opportunities to expand contemporary arts practice by working with diverse sectors such as health, business, education, community and the environment. We work independently and in collaboration to create new contemporary art and performance.

3. Our objects

- (1) We support the role arts have in identifying and responding to regional vulnerabilities. Using art-based activity and projects, we will help create resilient communities and individuals in response to significant change impacting Australia including climate change, economic instability, marginalisation, feminism and mental health.
- (2) We partner with service providers and community groups to build relationships and connect our communities by advancing arts, culture and our community, tell stories and celebrate remote landscapes and the people that live within them.
- (3) We increase opportunities for people in our communities to participate in arts and cultural activities, ensuring that we place people at the centre of our arts practice, believing that if the arts is about an exploration of the human condition, then engagement with human beings is the best way to make meaningful work.
